Wood

ikasmobilya.com

If you desire a natural look and the warmth of wood for your home and workplace, you can bring a brand new look to your living spaces with wooden doors, interior stairs, fences and verandas for the garden. Wooden doors in harmony with the wall colour for homes and offices will perfectly complement the decoration. When choosing wooden doors, which can be preferred from dark wood to lighter tones, you may also pay attention to the type and colour of the flooring as well as the colour of the walls. Modern and minimal door motifs, fluted or glazed doors may be more harmonious with a plain coloured home decoration. Light colours in furniture and doors will always give a more spacious look. Wooden stairs in the house can be built to match the colour of the walls and doors depending on the classic, modern or eclectic style of the house. Mezzanine stairs are a very modern option both in terms of appearance and style along with steel construction.

Parquet Flooring

By renewing your flooring, you can achieve a huge transformation in your home without having to change your existing furniture and accessories. Thanks to parquet floorings, which are one of the most preferred building materials for flooring in living spaces, you can both achieve a good sound and heat insulation and bring a cosy appearance to your home decoration. It is advisable to get an expert opinion for parquet selections, which can vary in terms of colour selection and texture depending on the area of application from living rooms to living rooms, from bedrooms to entrance halls or offices. Solid parquets made of natural wood are preferred every season with their vintage or modern-looking textures and colour alternatives from light to dark.

Suspended Ceiling

ikasmobilya.com

Ceilings, which are the basic aesthetics of construction and interior architecture for offices and workplaces, are divided into two as modular and decorative. Office suspended ceilings are usually made of modular ceilings suitable for offices.

Suspended ceilings are secondary ceilings that are suspended from the overhead base plate, creating a gap between the underside of the base plate and the top of the suspended ceiling. This space created by the suspended ceiling can provide a useful space for the distribution of wiring and installation. Suspended ceilings give a decorative appearance to buildings and are also preferred for sound and heat insulation.

One of the most popular reasons for having a suspended ceiling is the concealment of structural or mechanical components that need to be out of sight, such as pipes, plumbing and cables. The flexibility of a suspended ceiling means that you will have easy access to hidden pipes or wiring for repairs; the panels can be easily opened when access to the top of the ceiling is required and neatly put back into place after repairs are done.
